ROCKETS

On Monday the 16th of October the children of Little Melton Primary School had a rocket afternoon with a man called Nick from a thing called STEAM co. in London. They work around rockets. Now Steam doesn't have very much in common with Rockets but in a way it does. The S stands for Science the T stands for technology the E stands for engineering the A stands for art and the M stands for maths. So now you know why it is called Steam but what about the co. That stands for co-operation co-ordination and words like that.

What did they do?

They watched a video of Nick when he was a baby - only 1 - and he got his first train and his father told him to make a bridge and how do you think he did that... With his imagination he bent his arm and that was his bridge. He also launched a paper rocket, he made and it went a long way. He also said that one boy
