

any of the other students because they all had weapons on them on them at all times.

The word spread across the whole empire of students and made its way to Erica.

"Grrr!" the lion wanted its prey. Sally was hopeless in the corner of the room sinking her way down to the floor in defeat. ✓ lovely sentence!

"Save me someone!" she called. But no one came. Sally fell silent and listened. Under her feet there was a shuffling and one of the large tiles shifted from the ground. A shape of a body was there. They poked their head out. It was Erica. ✓

"Erica its you!" cheered Sally.

"Of course its me!" Erica snapped back. Erica didn't need a weapon. She hurtled herself onto the lions back ready to fight. But instead of fighting she stroked it. The creature nelt to the floor and closed its eyes.

"Aar!" screamed Sally when its face came to close.

"Calm down its alright!" replied Erica. Sally was violently chewing away at her sleeve.

Professor Crandall came back into the room because he had heard the growling stop.

"It looks like you completed my challenge!" He said not knowing it was just asleep.

"I will give you an A+ for that lesson Sally!" He declared.

"What are you doing here Erica? Get back to your class!"

✓ Erica removed herself from the room. The bell rang. Everyone made their way out of the room to the mess hall.

Marking ladder for a FINAL draft Spy School story.	I think ...	My TEACHER thinks...
Setting description	△	△
Character description (imagery, noun phrases)	△	△
Dilemma (action scene)	△	△
Punctuation : ; - " "	△	△
Short sentences / paragraphs (for tension or to make an important part of the story stand out)	△	△

I think I could improve .... making it not end so quidy. You could have explained what happened to the lion. yes I agree

Next steps from my TEACHER: lovely range of punctuation. Some really super descriptive word choices. N/S: Just a couple of sentences need changes to one wording to ensure they are clear. look carefully at my marking. ok

* Please take to Mr. Pitchard for a HT Award! ok