

Weekly Newsletter 28th June 2018

Dear Parents,

Last Thursday, our team of computer coders performed extremely well at the UEA Scratch-Off competition with both teams winning prizes for their work. The unseen task set was to design a 'Time-Telling App' and both teams were selected by the judges for their efforts. They then had to demonstrate their work to a large audience in the lecture theatre. Liam and Levi won 3rd place overall and Jack and Chloe won 'most promising' award. Well done!

This week, children from Year 5 have visited Norwich School for Girls for their popular science day. The children enjoyed taking part in a number of experiments led by specialist staff- including rocket -building, perfume-making and code-cracking!

Today, our team of cricketers from Eagle Owls will be participating in the Norfolk Cricket Shield at Sprowston cricket ground. This is likely to be a very high standard of competition, but I am sure that they will enjoy the experience. Good luck to Jake, Annabel, Ruby, Alana, Lily, Alfie, Liam, Fynn and Dylan.

Finally, some fantastic news of a national award for the school! Children in Eagle Owls entered and won the 'Great Bug Hunt 2018' competition. <http://www.schoolscience.co.uk/bughunt>
There were over 4,000 schools nationally who took part, so clearly to have won represents a significant achievement. The judges were highly impressed with the quality of the childrens scientific work in the project. The school will be receiving the exciting prize 'in October with an insect day provided by the Royal Entomological Society. Well done to Mrs Bushell who led and developed this activity in school.

The recipient of this week's Head Teacher award is:

School PE T-Shirts

We recently learnt that our clothing suppliers are now able to provide the school PE shirts in the four different house colours (see picture). We thought that it would be a nice idea to encourage children, when they need a new shirt, to purchase one in their house colours. This would help to build up their sense of being in a team at both sports day and also in normal school PE lessons. The shirts can be ordered in the usual way at:

<https://www.superstitch86.co.uk/product/red-little-melton-p-e-t-shirt/>. To be clear however, there is no expectation at all that anyone should buy new shirts for their children, until they actually need to buy a bigger one. This is intended to be a gradual change over time, because we all recognise that there are many more important demands on all family budgets.

The Great Bug Hunt 2018

The winners of this year's Great Bug Hunt competition have been announced! The competition, brought to you by the Association for Science Education (ASE) and supported by the Royal Entomological Society (RES), takes science learning out of the classroom and brings it to life outdoors.

The winning entries were chosen during National Insect Week by a team of judges 2018, including Dr Luke Tilley from the RES and Rebecca Dixon Watmough from the ASE.

The children explored habitats to discover and record some fascinating invertebrates. Their finds were then explained and displayed in workbooks, posters and factsheets using graphs, photos, pictures and poems.

"The Great Bug Hunt competition is a brilliant way of bringing science to life for children and shows that you can go on a journey of discovery in your own backyard. Not only does the competition do a great job of capturing children's imaginations, it also fits in well with the science curriculum. Using the natural environment when teaching is an important part of science education and something the ASE strongly advocates through its Outdoor Science Working Group" (Marianne Cutler, ASE Professional Development (Projects) Lead).

First prize of an "insect day" at the school goes to Little Melton Primary School in Norwich.
